

Degradation of Pesticides by Microorganisms, A Literature Review***

Camelia Costela FASOLA (LUNGEANU), Loredana DIMA, Constanta Laura
AUGUSTIN (ZUGRAVU), Maria Magdalena
TUREK RAHOVEANU and Gheorghe Adrian ZUGRAVU

“Dunarea de Jos University of Galati, Romania

Correspondence should be addressed to: Camelia Costela FASOLA; lungeanu.camelia@yahoo.com;

* Presented at the 37th IBIMA International Conference, 30-31 May 2021, Cordoba, Spain

Copyright © 2021. Camelia Costela FASOLA (LUNGEANU), Loredana DIMA, Constanta Laura
AUGUSTIN (ZUGRAVU), Maria Magdalena TUREK RAHOVEANU and Gheorghe Adrian ZUGRAVU

Abstract

In the lists of potentially toxic substances, pesticides are considered to have a priority role in terms of soil and water quality monitoring. Some pesticides are compounds that cannot be degraded naturally, having a long remanence time in the environment, context in which their dangerous character is highlighted as a consequence of their accumulation potential in trophic levels.

Keywords: Degradation of Pesticides, Sustainable Development.